ABSTRACT

The emergency form at the Panarukan Health Center in Situbondo Regency still uses the outpatient form in identifying emergency patients. The problem that occurs is that the form does not have a place to write the signatures of doctors and nurses who provide services to patients and those in charge of delivering patients, resulting in unclear responsibility for providing patient health services and as a form of legality of the files and actions that have been given during the service. This study aims to design an emergency patient form at the Panarukan Health Center. This type of research is descriptive qualitative with data collection methods of interviews, observation, documentation, and Focus Group Discussion (FGD). The results of the design of the emergency patient form are based on the physical aspects of the paper material using HVS 80 grams with A4 portrait size, using white and black ink. From an anatomical aspect, the head or heading is given the logo of the puskesmas and Situbondo Regency, applying the title of the form to "Emergency Form", and adding the form number, issue date, and form page. The introduction section applies the initial name change according to the type of form used. In the instructions section, instructions for filling in are briefly added, as well as fixing the type style and spacing in the body section. On the cover or closes, provide legality by affixing the signature and full name of the doctor in charge. The content aspect section for distribution is adjusted to the contents of the Permenkes IGD form No. 269 of 2008 by adjusting the grouping, order of items, and determining how to fill out the emergency patient form design..
