ABSTRACT

This study aims to analyze and explain the accountability of village fund allocation management in Sukorambi Village, Sukorambi District, Jember Regency. The research method used is a qualitative method using primary and secondary data, namely the results of interviews with informants and the results of documentation in the form of data realization attachments, baleho, and Village Government Work Plans. To test the validity of the data using triangulation techniques and sources. The results of this study explain that Sukorambi Village has implemented the principle of accountability regarding the management of village fund allocations. However, there are still problems, namely the administration system in inputting network data is sometimes problematic and also requires extreme caution so as not to experience errors.
